Worldschooling Newsletter

Kenia, about Worldschooling while working fulltime for a corporation.

One of the most asked questions in the Worldschool world is: How do you afford this lifestyle? In this newsletter Kenya explains how she Worldschools while working fulltime for a large cooperation.

Every Worldshooler has a story to tell

Every traveling family has a unique background, experience or knowledge, that they can share with other to expand and inspire.

In our newsletter we offer a platform to all the different stories that are out there.

In this newsletter:

Kenia Fuertes, about Worldschooling while working fulltime for a corporation.

Hi Kenia, can you please tell us a bit about your family and your travels?

Originally from NYC, I am a single mom, travelling nomadically for the past 2 years with my 16 year old teen. I work full-time as a remote worker at a large global commercial real estate company. My daughter is an unschooler and aspiring artist. One of our goals as we Worldschool throughout the world is dropping into arts studios or arts workshops or working with different artists one on one in order to further my daughter's dream of becoming a professional artist.

When did you start working remotely?

I've hit my 15th year anniversary this year, so I have been working for this company a long time remote working on and off over the years, but in different roles. I've been in my current role for about 5 years now, and working remotely for the past 4 years. We started travelling nomadically in April of 2022, so about 2 years now.

How do you manage to travel while working for a corporation?

I am able to travel because the work that I do is 100% international work and mostly over email and phone. While I am technically based out of the U.S., I don't do any work there. I am global transactions manager on a small team overseeing work in 200+ cities around the world (80 of these my company has offices in). Sometimes we choose to travel to locations where my company has an office so that I am able to work out of that office and spend a few weeks in that city working physically alongside some of my colleagues.

How do you combine working fulltime and Worldschooled your arts aspired daughter as a single mom?

My workdays can be very flexible due to the different timezones I work closely with. I am frequently able to create large blocks of space throughout my day to work around the different things that we want to do, depending on the city that we are in and the activities we're interested in —whether that's dropping off for an art class, meeting up with friends, participating in various Worldscooling hubs, or volunteer opportunities for my teen.

What would you recommend for families who are interested in a position like yours?

Honestly, I don't know. It took me more than 20 years to get where I am! Although I do think more and more companies today are looking for remote workers (despite what the media says!). There are many on social media providing list of companies who provide remote work positions. Many are entry level positions and the ones that aren't entry level require years of experience. Entry level remote jobs are easier to get, but they are not going to be the ones paying the high salaries folks are expecting. Tech is hot at the moment (again!), esp AI related positions. I've seen many of these positions out there with some offering remote work (e.g., cybersecurity, etc), but you have to invest in a certain level of education and certifications.

What is your story? Share it with the Worldschoool world.

Only 5 spaces left for Bansko!

Bansko is filling up fast and there are only a few spaces left in the complex.

After this, housing in the community complex can not be guaranteed!

We have mostly smaller families joining us this year, so there are still 2 bedroom apartments left for larger families. If you come with older kids, this might also be an option.

So looking forward to another great winter season again!

Worldschooling Netherlands online!

We are so proud that we created a program for the Netherlands again! Despite the Netherlands being an expensive country, we managed to created an affordable program while keeping the quality that made Worldschoolling Netherlands such a succes before. It is a program that me and my family are really looking forward to experiencing again.

Family program

Worldschooling Netherlands offers a program for the full family, with everything included:

Housing at an amazing location, private transportation to the activities all over the country, a high quality activity program of 45! activities including entrances to museums, celebrations, amusement parks, workshops and more, that teaches in depth understanding about the Dutch country and culture.

Worldschooling Playa del Carmen started!

While preparing Worldschooling Bansko and Worldschooling Netherlands for the next season, we landed in Playa del Carmen, which we called home for so many years. Back then Playa del Carmen was the first Worldschool community, but after Covid this town lost its community. While here, we are trying to create a community again of Homeschool and Worldschool families, resulting in the first two meetups last week, where we visited a waterpark and a cenote.
